CASE STUDY

The firm designed a personal disability policy for one of Hollywood's A List actors earning an excess of $15,000,000 per film. The policy would pay him an aggregate benefit of $55 million in the event of a disability. To adequately cover his affluent lifestyle, the policy was structured to pay $500,000 a month. If after 60 months the actor was deemed permanently disabled, he would receive a lump sum payout of $25 million to cover loss of future earnings

CASE STUDY

A famous recording artist was preparing for a worldwide concert tour to promote her top selling debut album. The firm secured non-appearance coverage for her management company. The coverage protected her from losing potential earnings if she had to cancel a tour appearance due to death, illness or other unexpected events.
