CASE STUDY

A private U.S. business owner of a cosmetics company owned a manufacturing plant in South America. He and various employees traveled to the plant often throughout the year. The advisor secured a Kidnap & Ransom policy on the owner, as well as his employees and family members. The coverage would pay for reimbursements of up to $5,000,000 of ransom in the event any person covered under the policy was kidnapped. The policy would also pay for all fees associated with the negotiations of the release and safe return of a victim.
